Under the heading, "As we see it," the Citizen indulged in a rather lengthy soliloquy last week on some of the duties and requirements of an editor. It is really encouraging to note that the Citizen is beginning to realize that a newspaper, in a broad sense, is a public institution. But you must learn also, neighbor, that if you want the confidence of the public you must be honest with the public. It is your privilege to take sides on any issue or defend and encourage any proposition, but always deal honestly with the public. The editor who stands for one thing in his editorial columns and something else in his private life can not have the confidence of the public. A newspaper containing an editorial on temperance in one column and an endorsement of some action of the whiskey faction of his party in another column is hardly likely to have much weight and influence among its readers. An editor can not be too careful in these matters, for the influence of the weekly newspaper is felt throughout the length and breadth of our country.

Book Lovers' Club.

Mrs. J. H. Whitfield was hostess of a delightful and enthusiastic meeting of the Book Lovers' Club Wednesday afternoon. She was assisted in receiving and entertaining by Mrs. W. T. Morris and Mrs. C. V. Rushing.

The president, Mrs. J. V. Travis, presided and the membership was well represented. Some papers were read on the subject, "Woman Suffrage," after which the club went into a general discussion of the topic. Mrs. T. J. Lowry and Miss Roberta Gibson were guests. Mrs. Robert Stockard and Mrs. S. L. Peeler won the prizes in a unique and interesting flower contest.

The hostess was assisted in serving delicious refreshments by little Misses Alline Lowry and Mary Ann Morris. To the delight of everyone present Miss Roberta Gibson rendered some very choice selections of music, after which books were exchanged and the club adjourned to meet with Mrs. Van Wyly May 8. Subject for discussion, "Books and their influences."

Very truly,
M. L. HARDIN.

Last Friday and Saturday were red letter days in the history of the poultry business in Camden. Before 8 o'clock Friday morning Manager C. C. Thompson of the Camden Produce Co., and a force of men were kept busy weighing chickens, and a good portion of the night was spent in loading a car. Saturday was a repetition of Friday, many bringing in hens by the wagonload. The company loaded nearly two cars, which is the largest shipment of poultry ever made from Camden, and about $6,000 was paid out by Mr. Thompson.

Some of our citizens were discussing the call of Chairman S. A. Clement of the Regulars' Committee (who is also editor of the Citizen) for a mass meeting, and the question was asked if it was regular for the chairman to call the mass meeting without the action of the committee. An old-time Democrat remarked that it was just about as regular as could be expected of the crowd that boasted of "regularity," that some men had rather be "regular" these days than to be right.
